

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

SPECIAL MEETING.

A social meeting of the Society was held, by invitation of Dr. JACOB BIGELOW, at his house, 59 Mount Vernon Street, Boston, on Tuesday evening, February 16th, at 8 1-2 o'clock, at the close of the lecture before the Lowell Institute.

The President called the meeting to order, and asked Mr. R. FROTHINGHAM to make some remarks relative to the occasion on which they had met.

Mr. FROTHINGHAM said he cheerfully complied with the call made upon him. This social meeting was happily suggested by our host, in view of the completion, this evening, of a course of lectures by members of the Society, at the Lowell Institute, designed to illustrate the early history of Massachusetts. He proposed the following vote, which was unanimously adopted:—

Voted, That the grateful acknowledgments of the Society are due to those members who have so ably and successfully treated the different themes assigned to them in the course of lectures delivered at the Lowell Institute; and especially to the Rev. George E. Ellis, D.D., and to his associates of the Committee, for the manner in which they have consummated the plan of those lectures; and to the Hon. John A. Lowell, for the liberality of his co-operation.